Freeze a Stockpile
of Sandwiches?
Why Not?

Get you hardly ever shot without getting something you don't intend to use right away. That's known as "stocking up" or stockpiling. Well, here's a great way to avoid those early morning skirmishes in the kitchen with the kids, the old man and you falling all over each other—stockpile sandwiches;
up-date your production methods with a once-a-week assembly line.
Prepare sandwiches in quantity at leisure, wrap, label and freeze until needed!

Naturally you can't freeze just any old thing.
Ideal fillings are cooked egg yolk; peanut butter; cooked or canned
chicken, turkey, meat, or fish; dried beef. Do not use very moist fillings, cooked egg white which toughens or raw vegetables such as lettuce and tomatoes which lose crispness. Do not use mayonnaise or salad dressing until ready for use as they separate on freezing.

All fresh breads freeze well. For sandwich variety try rye, wheat, white breads, hamburger and hotdog buns. Spread generously with soft butter to keep fillings from soaking in. Wrap sandwiches in a moisture-vapor proof freezer wrap such as saran; seal with tape listing the filling and date made. Now don't try to skimp on wrap by putting more than one sandwich in a package. You'll wind up with, what is called,
"flavor transfer"— strawberry jam flavored egg yolk and that sort of thing. You can store your prepared sandwiches up to two weeks
a O'F.
See you next week.
